Special Features

August Action on the Fort Worth Rails

by Jerry Nunn (all photo credit)

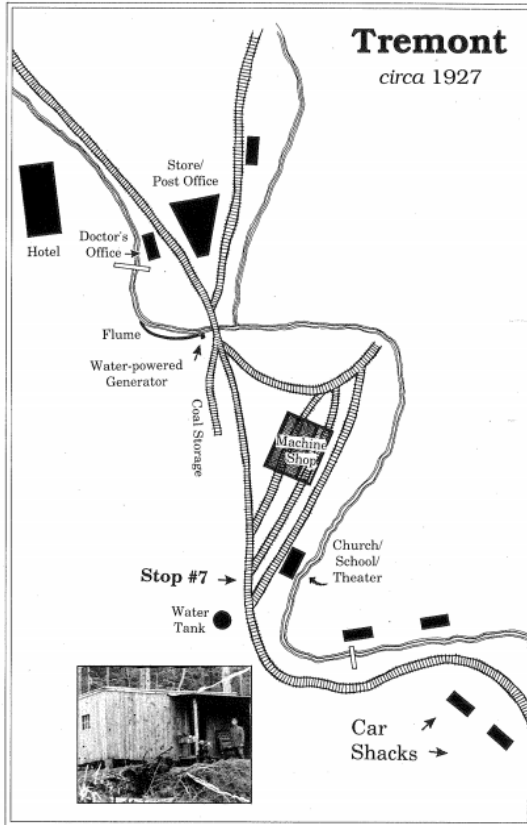

These were taken in and around Ft. Worth August 13-20. Most interesting is a BNSF Warbonnet No. 751 whose paint is in relatively good condition. Also, the photo of CN 2413, a C39-8i think, has an interesting decal on its side instead of the usual "CN" logo. There are also a couple of pretty intricate graffiti photos.

Logging Railroad in the Great Smoky Mountains

by Jon Shea, VP Programs

These pages are from a booklet of a self-guided driving tour of the former Tremont Logging Area in Great Smoky Mountains National Park. The Tremont Logging Operation went from 1926-1939 and had an extensive railroad network and operations. They also had steam powered cranes that ran on the rails to move logs on to flatcars and a mile long network of cables that moved logs from the mountains to the railroad. It was probably similar to railroads at logging operations in the piney woods of East Texas except that the terrain in the Smokies is much more rugged.

1 railroad logging

This road now follows the original railroad that pushed up the Middle Prong of the Little River. Steam-powered skidders snaked logs from the mountainsides and steam loaders piled railroad cars high for the trip to the sawmill at Townsend. In 1926, as logging operations were finishing up at Elkmont, men and equipment were moved to the Middle Prong of Little River and Tremont became the "boom" town.

The name of the stream on your right is Stillhouse Branch, a name which suggests there were other ways besides logging to make a living in these mountains.

Rod-driven steam locomotive

Gear-driven locomotive

2 switching railcars

This area was known as "Wildcat." Loaded flatcars were brought down from the mountains by the gear-driven Shay steam locomotives. Only gear-driven engines could handle the steep grades above this point. (You can see a gear-driven engine at the Little River Railroad and Lumber Company Museum in Townsend.)

The cars were pulled onto sidings in the flat to your right, awaiting arrival of the conventional rod or piston driven engines from Townsend. The train from Townsend brought back empty cars to be picked up and returned to the mountains by the geared engines.

Engines did not actually pull the flatcars, but rather pushed the empty cars uphill and backed down with the loaded cars. This arrangement helped prevent runaway railcars. At least two engines were needed to handle the heavily loaded 15-20 car trains.

Special equipment on the engines applied a layer of sand to the rails to give added traction, and brakemen set and released the brakes individually on each car. Runaways still happened. There are any number of stories of runaway trains such as the one that killed Daddy Bryson on Jakes Creek above Elkmont and the two engine wreck on Marks Creek above Tremont.

Steam engines used large quantities of water which had to be replenished frequently. The small stream on your right filled the water tank which met that need.

Texas Trunk Railroad

by Jon Shea, VP Programs

The Texas Trunk Railroad got its charter on November 6, 1879. It was to build from Dallas southeast to a point on the Gulf Coast near Beaumont, TX. A branch line was also proposed to run from Angelina or Tyler County to the border of Louisiana. The proposed length of the railroad was 350 miles, the main office was in Dallas and it was capitalized with $5 million dollars in stock. The railroad hoped to reach the timber harvesting areas in the piney woods of East Texas and bring the lumber to Dallas for processing and sale and also expand the marketing and trade area served by Dallas. By August 1881, a 36 mile line from Dallas to Kaufman had been completed but carried only local traffic. By December 1881 the railroad was in receivership for the first of many times in its 20 year existence. Track laying began again on June 15, 1883 and by December 1, 1883, 16 more miles were built from Kaufman to Cedar which was later known as Gossett. The most successful period of operations was after the second reorganization from 1885 to 1889. Other reorganizations followed until the Texas Trunk Railroad was purchased by the Texas and New Orleans on November 25, 1899. The legislative act authorizing this required the T&NO to construct a line from Cedar to an existing rail line at Rockland within a 4 year period. By 1903, a 160 mile line going through Athens and Nacogdoches was finished. This finally completed a line from Dallas to Beaumont which was the original purpose of the railroad. Most of the track is now abandoned. This nearly forgotten railroad is remembered by Trunk Avenue in Dallas. The street is now split by Interstate 30 but the northern section goes through the eastern part of deep Ellum and the southern part is a few blocks west of Fair Park. I suppose the railroad ran on or near this street but I don't know for sure.

Chapter Business Meeting Minutes, August 4, 2015.

NORTH TEXAS CHAPTER, NATIONAL RAILWAY HISTORICAL SOCIETY, MINUTES, DATE: August 4, 2015. Founders Building, Grapevine, Texas.

The meeting was held at the Grapevine Founder's Building. President Wayne Smith was unable to attend, so the meeting was called to order by VP-Programs Jon Shea at 7:35pm. There were 13 members in attendance.

Jon reported on member Claude Doane's progress. Claude was in the hospital for almost a month after complications from leg surgery. He is getting better and if healed enough, asked if we could reschedule our planned visit to the Garland Railroad Museum in October. Jon will keep in touch with Claude and will tentatively make plans for such if Claude is up to the task.

While on the subject of future meetings, Jon reported the September meeting would be held at the Grapevine facility, October tentatively at the Garland RR Museum, November back in Grapevine for the annual member auction and December's Christmas Dinner will be at Babe's restaurant in Carrollton.

Jon reported about several railroad artifacts he acquired at an antique mall in The Strand in Galveston and shared a brochure that member Edwin Pegelow brought on the restored interurban station in Burseson, TX. He also had a copy of the Katy Historical Society newsletter containing an article about long-time railroad historian Joe Collias' passing away recently.

VP- Trips & Events Skip Waters reported on our book sales. We need workers to man the chapter's table selling books at both Plano train shows. Sales have slacked off during summer but we need to promote for Christmas. Jeff Phelps will arrange for tablecloths to dress up the sales table. January's show will feature the 11th Annual Slide and Media Show and for the September show, Skip wants to hold a Slide Auction similar to the ones we do at Saginaw. It will be on Saturday, Sept. 26 from 6-10 pm. A motion to proceed and rent the presentation room at the Southfork Hotel was made by Jerry Nunn and seconded by Bob Kennedy and the motion carried.

Skip reported on the NRHS convention in Vermont. He took the train trip to Burlington, Vermont and remarked the hotel was decent. While there, he gave a presentation to the board. He reported that all members would receive an email from Amelia at headquarters asking for member signups. This is not a scam but a legitimate request from headquarters and all members should join. He reported the 2015 Winter board meeting scheduled for Dallas had been cancelled as there was no business to discuss. The By-Laws change did away with the mandatory 4 meetings annually. Convention attendance was 500+ and excursions ran at 80% or better filled. He felt the convention was a 'break even or made money' event. Next year's convention will be in Denver in July and Skip and Steve Siegerist are on the committee to check out the area ahead of time. A possible railfan trip would be a deadhead from Denver to Cheyenne on Sunday, July 20. The Colorado Rail Museum will be a focus point for many activities.

Skip reported he now has a real job driving a trackless train M-Th at Willow Bend Mall from 10:30am -3:30pm. He and member Jeff Phelps, who are both members of the 'Friends of the BNSF', were invited to participate in a focus group with 28 others at the BNSF Headquarters. BNSF provided a lunch cooked by BNSF chefs and after a Q & A period, they met with BNSF corporate officials and took a grand tour of all the paintings in Headquarters. They were the first of several focus groups to be called in the near future.

Jeff Phelps brought a copy of AAA magazine with a picture of Frisco #1635 on the front cover. The engine is currently at the Museum of American Railroads in Frisco and Jeff commented he had personally replaced the front running boards on the engine when it was overhauled, so now his work has been published.

Members took a short break before the evening program provided by member Jerry Nunn entitled 'Railroad Adventures: Alaska to Texas & South America to the end of the world in Tiera del Fuego at the Straits of Magellan'. Submitted by Dave Gramm, Secretary.
